Microsoft Word is a widely-used productivity suite that is widely used to create documents. These documents may be written using the following file types: DOC, DOCX, PDF, PPT, PPTX, XPS, and many more. If you have lost access to these file types, or if they are corrupted or damaged in any way, then you are going to need to find a way to get your hands on them. But this isn't just a problem in the physical world, and you could be stuck without your Word files for many reasons too. Corrupt A corrupted Word document is a collection of files, spread across your computer, which are unable to be opened by Microsoft Word. Consequently, the data within these files is inaccessible and you'll have to open up a backup copy of the document. Overwrite If you've opened a document with your new version, then this version of the file may overwrite the previous one, or you may just be losing access to your previous version entirely. Crashing If you have opened a document and it has become unresponsive, you may have a corrupted file that will crash your application or computer. This is less common in the physical world than it is in the digital, but a crashing Word document is something that you should be aware of. The following files are supported by Yodot DOC Repair Microsoft Word 2003 and newer Microsoft Word 2007 and newer Microsoft Word 2010 and newer Microsoft Word 2013 and newer Microsoft Word 2016 and newer Microsoft Word 2019 and newer Open Office.org and LibreOffice.org Office Open XML formats Rich text format (RTF) The Open XML formats are of the word processing document types you may want to recover in case you lost them.
