One of the biggest problems that are facing apps today are App store rejections. As you know, apps are not designed to automatically move over to the App store. Designers, Developers and Investors have to create a new app specifically for handpicked devices so that the app will not be rejected by Apple. However, some artists were able to create an app by using the etcher software. The iTunes Connect has hundreds of different limitations that forces people to use totally different creative approaches. But if you are going to make use of the etcher, you have to create artwork from scratch using various tools. The following is a simple guide to creating iPhone app using etcher. You have to be fully aware of the limitations of the etcher software. Profile and create the artwork using the etcher software directly from the device. Note that the iPhone and the iPad do not have the same screen resolution. The reason why the etcher app developer is going to create the App is to fit in the App store's requirement of the app icon, the app store logo, and the app name. All those are about 7 inches in the size, and the image should be in the HD resolution. You cannot make use of the preview option, because if you use the preview option you have to resample the image. Frankly, because of all the limitations, you cannot expect a perfect image. Point and click: It's the best way to work in Photoshop, but has limitations. A better way is to use the Select tool to create your selection. Then, go back and use the Marquee tool to refine your selection. And there will be times you will need your Select tool and the Marquee tool for different amounts of time, but you can switch between them freely. This gives you more on tap your options. e3d0a04c9c
